PARCOURS MANAGEMENT OF EUROPEAN AFFAIRS
The European Union is one of the most famous actors in the world. In fact, each member state has to apply regulations enacted by the European Union institutions. Each field of the European life is concerned: agriculture, business, health, environment, and movement of persons. Managing company or dealing in the European market requires a deep understanding of the European Union system. Hundreds of jobs are created every year directly in the institutions (The Parliament, the European Commission, the Court of Justice, etc.) or more than a thousand new jobs, in other worldwide institutions and in the business companies, linked with the European Union. In the public or the private field of the economic life, the European Union plays an important part.

The Master European and International Studies (EIS) was created with the ambition to educate the next experts on European Unions. These experts have to acquire multidisciplinary competences: economic, finance, law, management, and political science.

This is a two-year program with two educational tracks: Management of European Affairs (MEA) and European economic and Political Affairs (EEPA).

If you are particularly interested in doing business in Europe or with Europe-based firms and organizations, don’t hesitate! Join the Master European and International Studies programs for all the competences that you need!

PURPOSES OF THE MASTER
The main purpose is to educate future experts and/or managers able to match the highest requirements of companies, institutions or other authorities which have to deal with European decision-making processes. These experts will master how the European decisions are made and how they affect the head office or subsidiar y institutions as in companies.

The Master European and International studies give to the students a complete multidisciplinary education in European economics and management. The students will also learn the basics of political science. This master is mainly intended for students who desire a career in an international or European institutions or companies. It targets also students who have some interest to do research.

OVERVIEW
The M1 (first and second semester) is devoted to a training of International Economics and management, European economics and management, European and International Business Law, Negotiation and Lobbying Techniques.

At the end of the academic year, students can either undertake an internship in an institution or a company from April to May (2 months max), or write a dissertation, or move to do the second semester in an international partner university.

The M2 allows students to develop a specialization in the third semester as well as to concretely apply the acquired knowledge through a six-month internship in a company or in an international or European Institutions during the fourth semester.

The Master’s degree prepares students for positions in various types of administrations (European, national, or local authorities), development agencies, chambers of commerce or specialized consultancies.
